"come into the mountains my dear friend,
leave society and take nothing with you but your true self, get close to nature your every day games will be insignificant, notice the clouds spontaneously forming patterns and try to do that with your life."

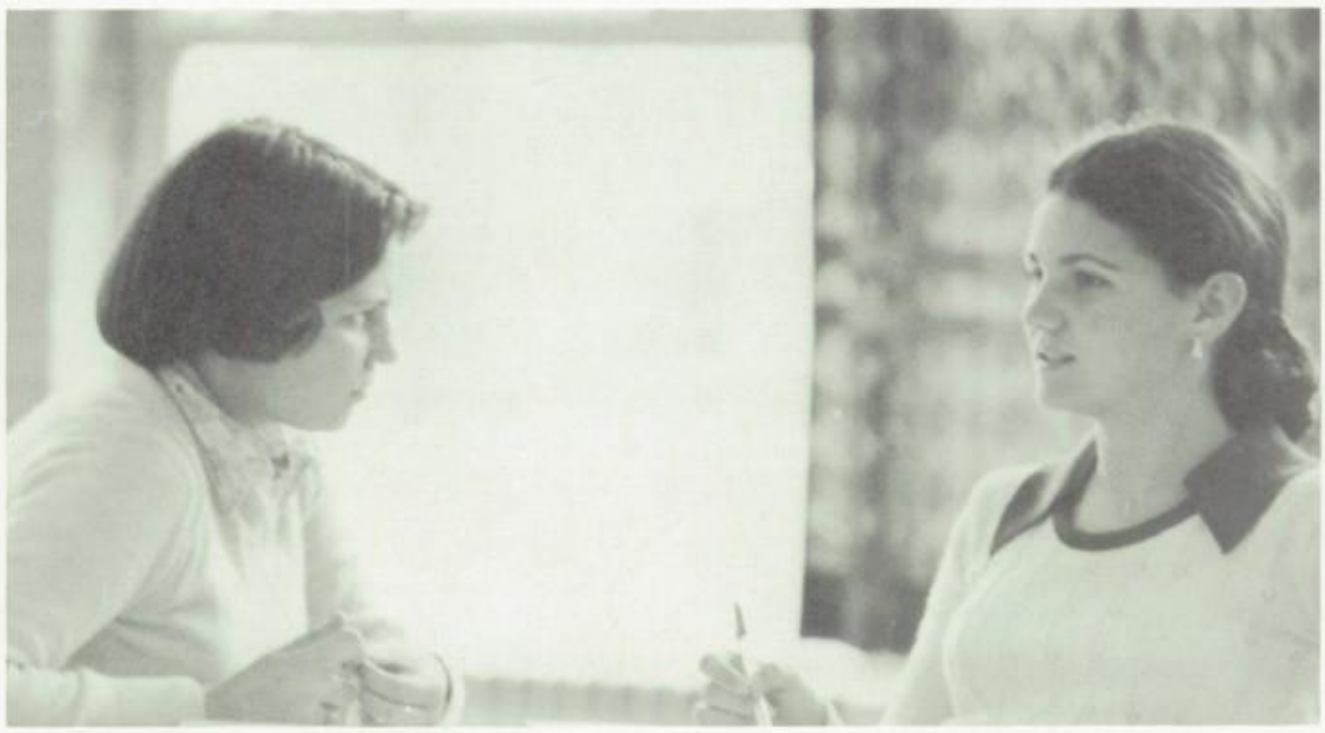
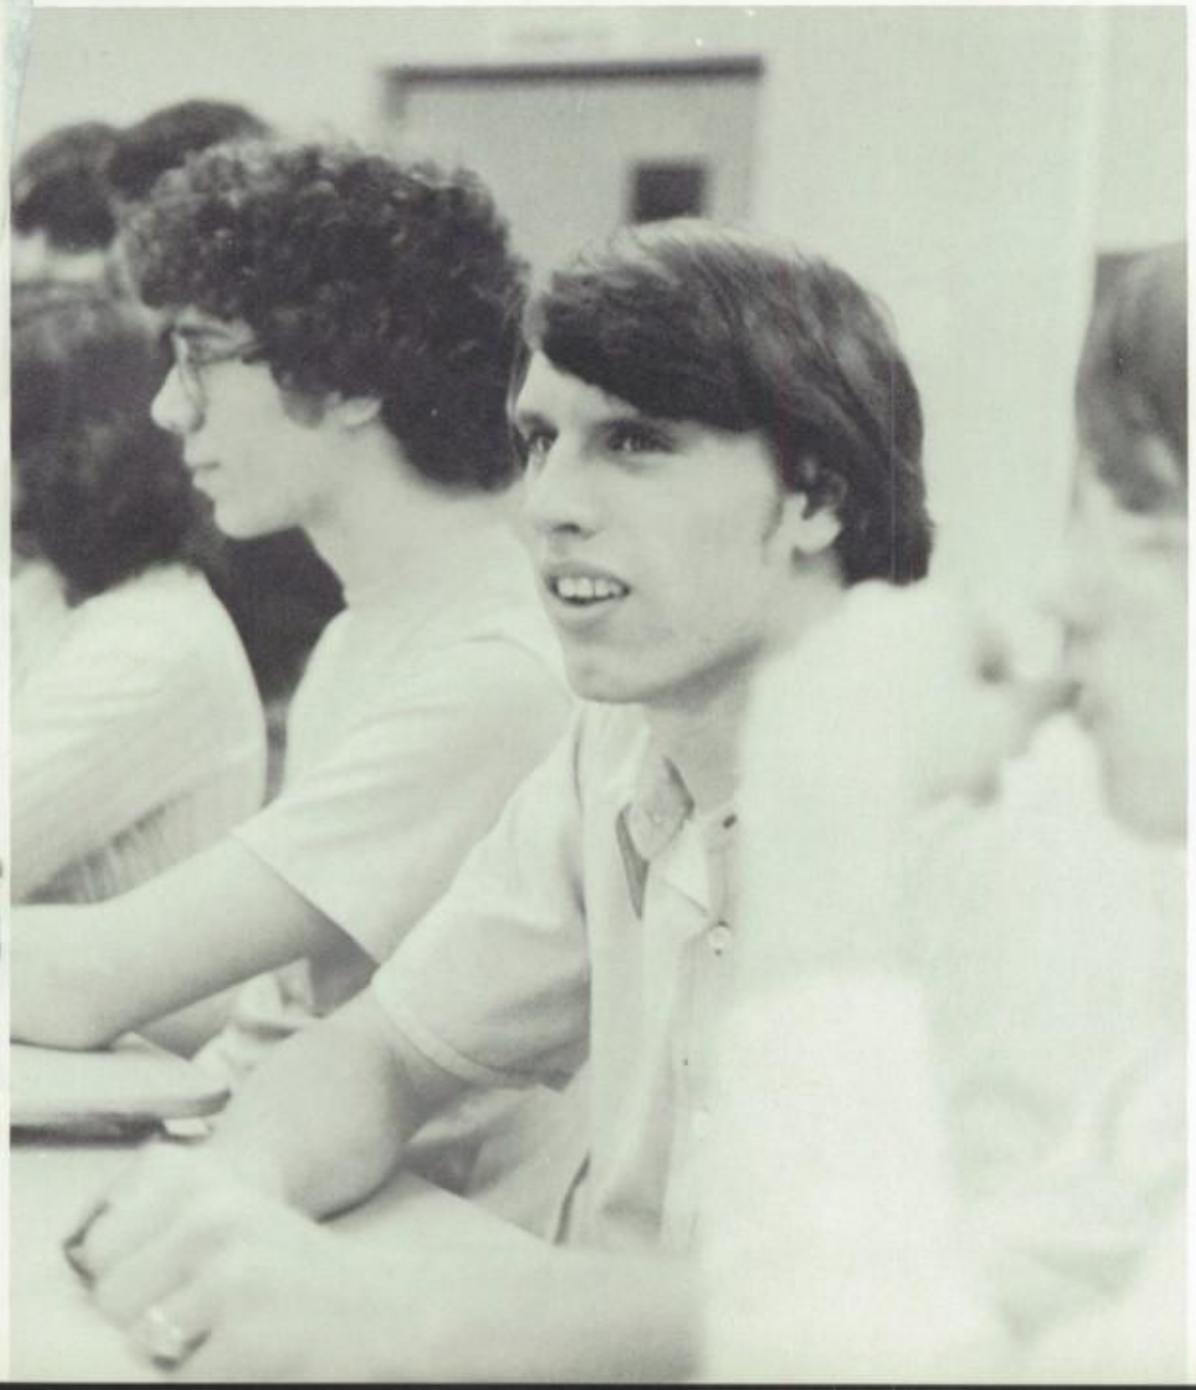
"reach to the world
to know,
to grow,
to love,
and
to risk,
finding ones
real self."





So as you go find yourself,
Don't look too hard,
You may pass yourself by,
Reaching too high,
Wanting the other side of life.
And as you go to take your place,
Don't go too fast,
Just pretend there's no end,
Make yourself last
Till the other side of life.
One day you'll find
Your restless searching at an end,
You'll think the world has changed
But it's just you my friend.
So as you go to please your heart
Please take your time,
Someone's waiting there too,
Waiting for you
On the other side of life.

we, the class of '77 are a vast variety of individuals sharing a multitude of experiences. many of us have worked long hard hours and the class as a whole has reaped the rewards. accomplishments have been witnessed regularly although downfalls have also been occasionally seen.

our freshmen year brought us great fame. after a year of considerable effort and toil we had raised $2200., thus giving us the title of the richest freshman class ever at roy c. ketcham high school and a reputation for diligent workers. the largest attribute to the great wealth of that year was "rex", a multi-purpose soap which along with the unyielding drive possessed by the members of our class, saw to our success. other fund raising activities included the selling of "class of '77" buttons and mother's day carnations, the latter a tradition which remained with us for all our years here.

sophomore year, though not as successful as our previous one financially, was just as flourishing in another way. it was in this year that the class of '77 senate was initiated. it was an effort to bring about better communications between class officers and the class. it was composed of representatives from each of the social studies classes and headed by the vice president of the class and the president protempore, who presided in the absence of the vice president. there was also the secretary of the senate whose duty it was to take the minutes of all meetings. our fund raising that year was limited, we had previously purchased 250 hats from the class of '74 and these along with helium balloons were sold at all football games. this along with mother's day carnations were the only bread-earning events of the year.

with two years of fruitful experiences behind us we were ready for a most active junior year. this year our class launched another first; we were the first class ever in r.c.k. to run the entire class election by ourselves. we planned and set up all the assemblies, ran the nominations and the actual election, and counted the ballots. this experience helped us not only further our knowledge of election procedure, but it also developed our sense of responsibility. our year was once again filled with hats, balloons, and mother's day carnations, but this was only the start. the school under the sponsorship of our class put on a concert featuring "hombre". this did not turn out to be as successful as we had hoped but it proved to be an unforgetable experience. also early that year we purchased a "mirage" 10 speed bicycle which was raffled off in december. as juniors it was our year to take charge of the basketball concession stand. with the labor of many class members it was a great accomplishment. besides the financial success it helped all of us who were involved to grow some. we dealt with people in a way in which we never had before, both as a buyer and a seller. the profit which was taken in went towards prom decorations. the prom was the glamorous affair of the year, but behind this beauty there were many long hours and many unthanked workers whom we never would have been able to do without. the theme was "colour my world" by chicago. the place was the gymnasium, which was another first for the class of '77. this proved to be an excellent arrangement because we had much more space and we were able to accomodate many more people than if it had taken place in the cafeteria as in previous years. our last activity as juniors was the annual garage sale. although we did secure a profit the event was not as successful as past years. it was with much gratitude for our luck and prosperity that we ended that year.

our senior year had a very shaky start. with the defeat of the budget and no funds available for school activities, which included advisors, insurance and after-school transportation, we were not sure how much if anything we would be able to accomplish. never the less we proceeded with caution. we planned our homecoming float and we were ready to advance providing there was football. with unending determination the school and its activities pulled through and with it so did our class. our homecoming float was a great success and was viewed as one of the best ever at r.c.k. the lack of funds could not hold us back; we forged ahead with the senior play, "babes in arms", which was one of the best senior plays ever. because of unfortuante weather conditions the production was not profitable financially, but in the eyes of those involved it was the most successful event in our years. both theatrically and presonally for all those who took part, the standing ovations were the ultimate reward for their time and effort. our next event was valentine-o-grams which was a success all around. we sold 950 carnations and at least that many songs. the closing event of our years here at ketcham was the senior prom. it was held at meadowbrook lodge and the theme was "we may never pass this way again" by seals and croft.

and so we come to the end of our high school years. in the future we will look back upon them with mixed emotions. we have shared many experiences and thoughts and in the future we will strive for new friendships in which more experiences and thoughts will again be shared. unfortunately those who participated in the clockwork of our activities were few, and yet we have reached virtually all members of our class mainly through the proms, but also through the other events of which we have been in charge. we hope that all whom we have touched in the past and all those whom we will touch in the future will be bettered, somehow, because of the contact they had or will have with us. the roy c. ketcham high school class of 1977 although it does not have the well-known "spirit of '76", does have its own unique spirit, a spirit which will rise to meet the future no matter how trying the obstacles.

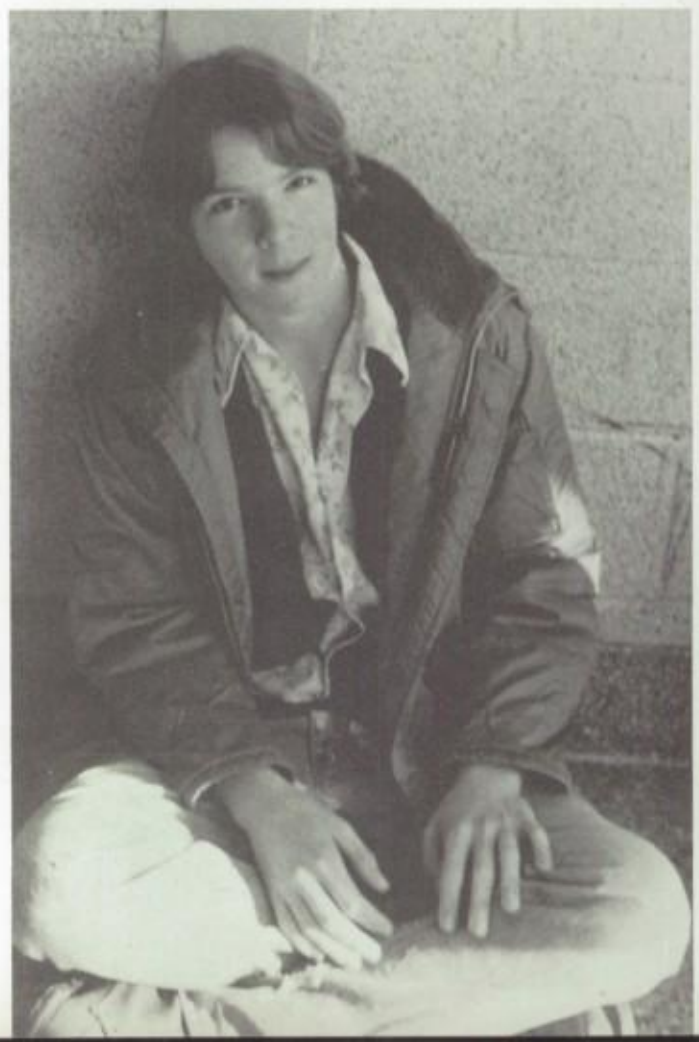
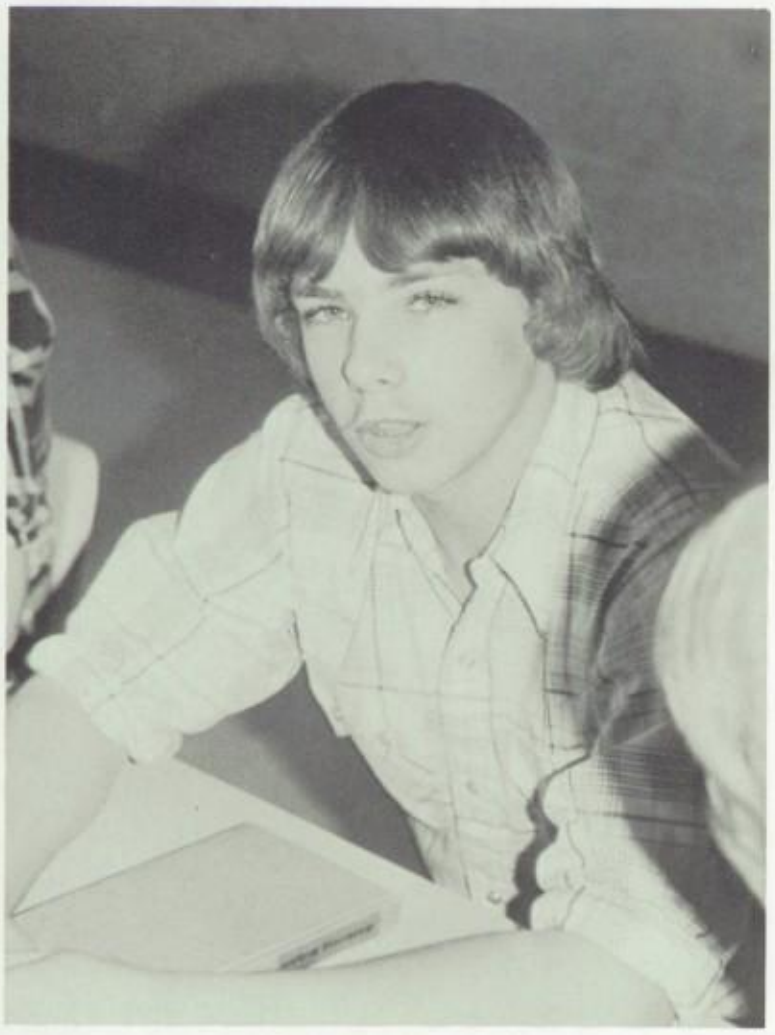
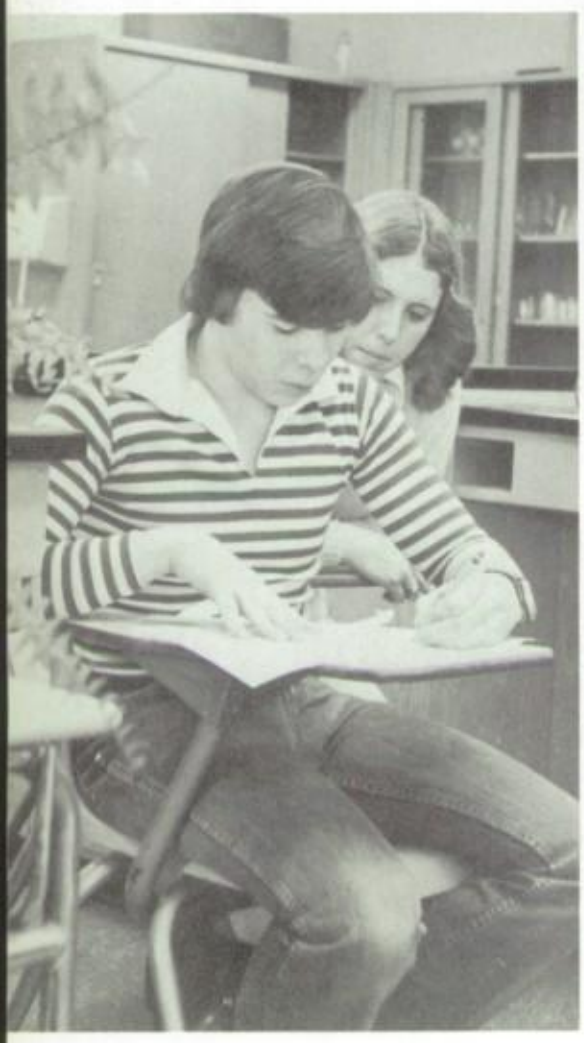
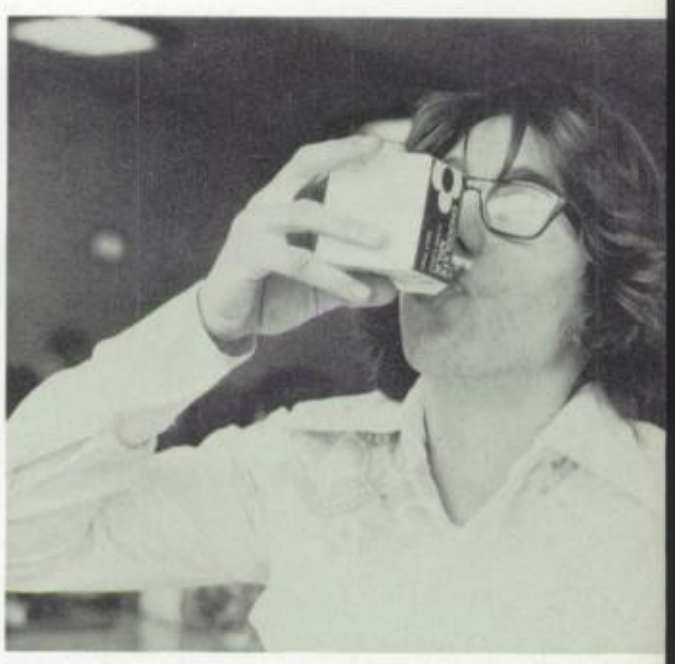
THANKSGIVING
FROM RETAILING









. . . life
my life is a cycle, happy and sad my life is a dream, fantasy and colors my life is reality, good and bad

my life, your life, everyone's life what do they mean? what are their goals?
"life is fate," said the wise man with a sigh
"life is lonely," said the man who couldn't smile life is darkness, life is joyous, life is depressing but for me . . .
life is adventure
i have to try to climb the highest mountain, swim the longest sea,
save nature from man's destruction.
impossible?
not for me.
i will try harder than anyone tried before.
i will give all i have to give.
my goals will contain all of me.
then i will be satisfied.
a dream? reality?
but i'll be happy.
i dream of being on a mountain,
towering above the shores or wading through a stream, nature's own fountain, rippling across the lands.
that makes me happy.
it's so simple yet so hard to find
i didn't even notice
reality as it creeps,
bringing its mood,
so dark, desolate and deep.
it's sadness and pain surrounding me, choking until death brings me peace.
you have to take the happy and the sad;
the fantasy and the colors;
the good and the bad
with each step you take.
life is what i want to make it.
it's my life.
let me live my life the way i want to live,
let me laugh when i want to laugh;
let me cry when i want to cry.
let me go!
don't hold me back! good-bye . . . love always, carrie.

yesterday a child came out to wonder. we caught a dragon fly inside a jar. fearful when the sky was full of thunder and tearful of the falling of a star.
and the seasons . . .
they go round and round and the painted ponies go up and down. we're captive on a carousel of time. we can't return we can only look behind from where we came and go round and round and round in the circle game. then the child grew ten times round the seasons skated over 10 clear frozen streams. words like when you're older must appease him and promises of one day make up his dreams.
and the seasons . . .
sixteen springs and sixteen summers gone now. cartwheels turn to carwheels through the town. and they tell him, take your time it won't be long now till you drag your feet just to slow the circles down.
and the seasons . . .
years have passed and now the boy is 20. though his dreams have lost a lot of grandeur coming true. they'll be new dreams, maybe better dreams, there'll be plenty of new dreams before the last revolving year is through.
and the seasons . . .

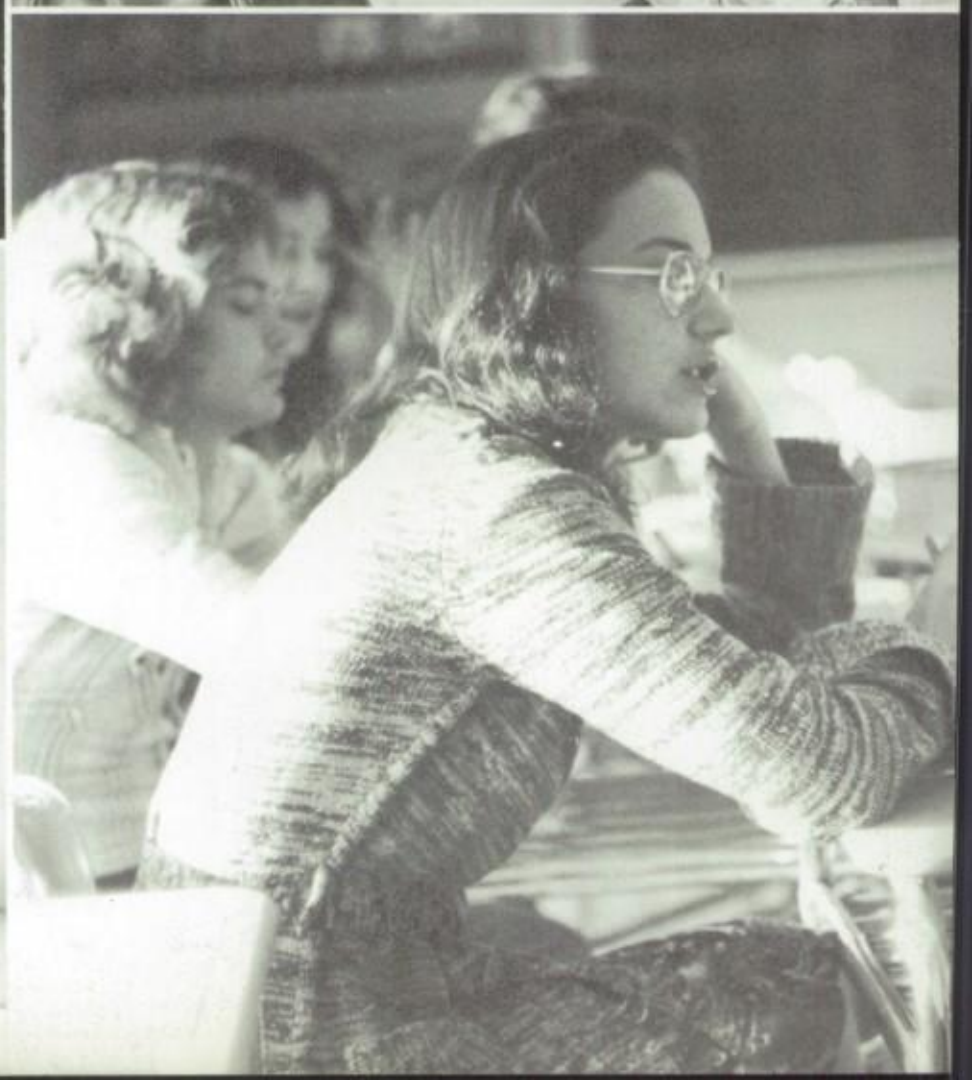
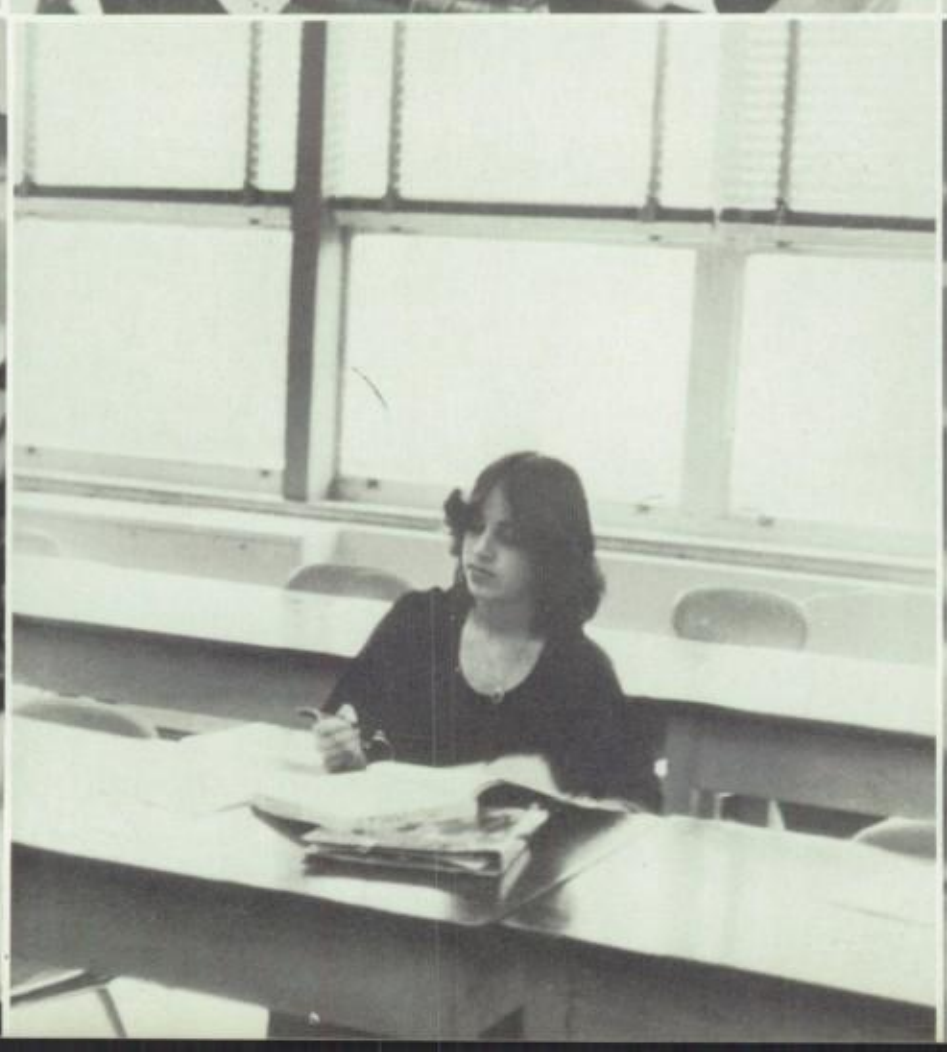
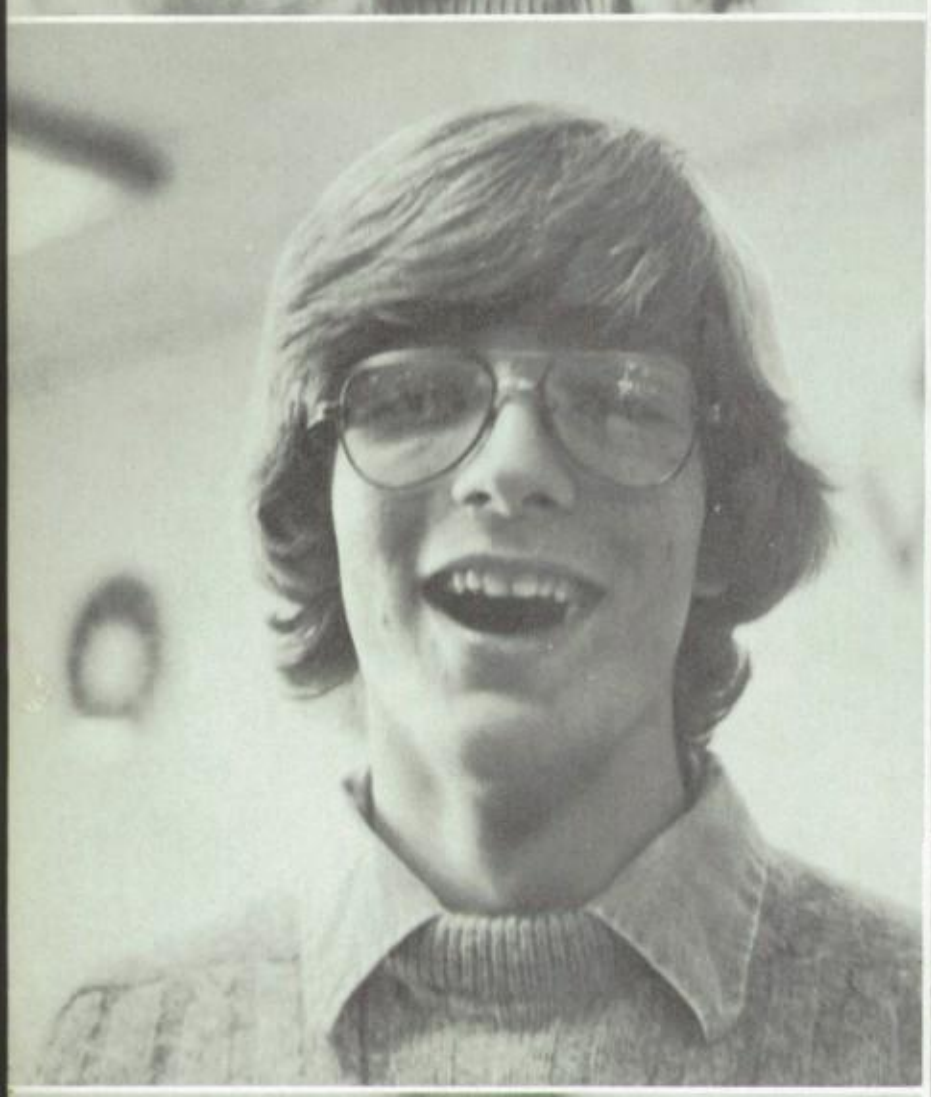
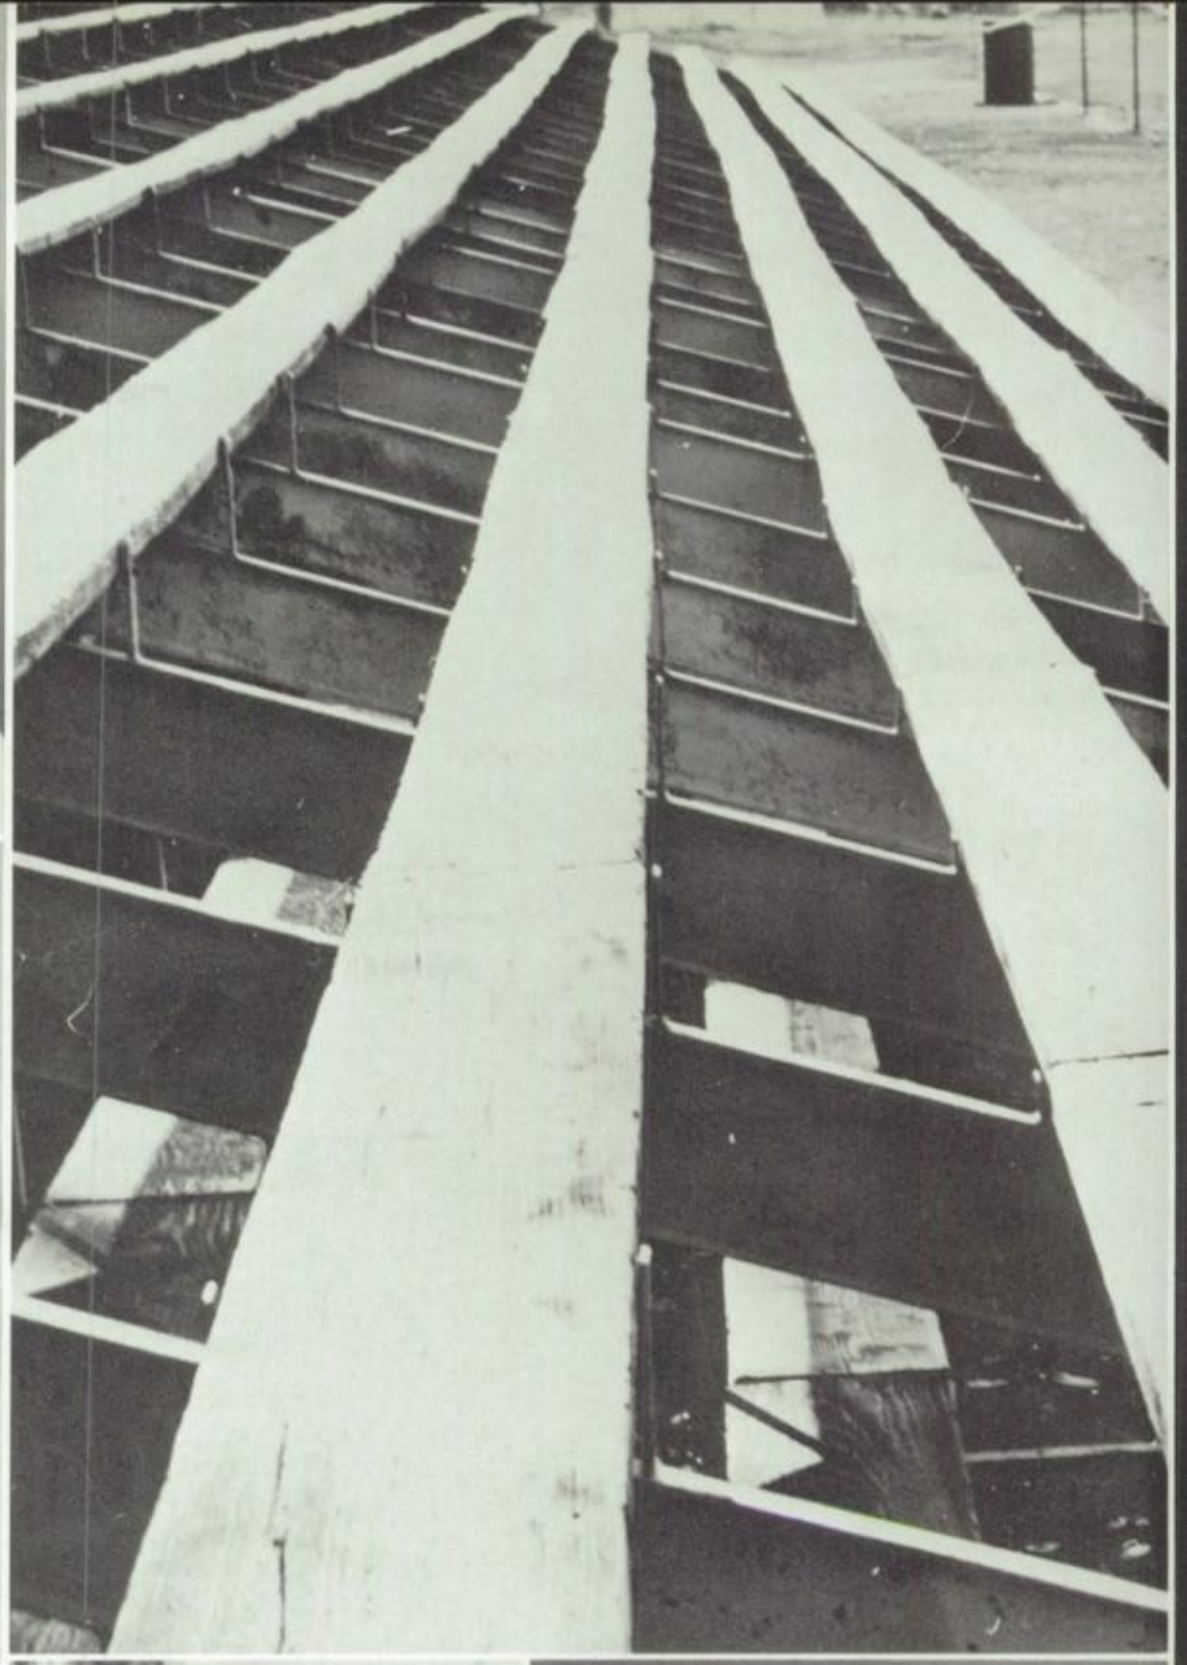
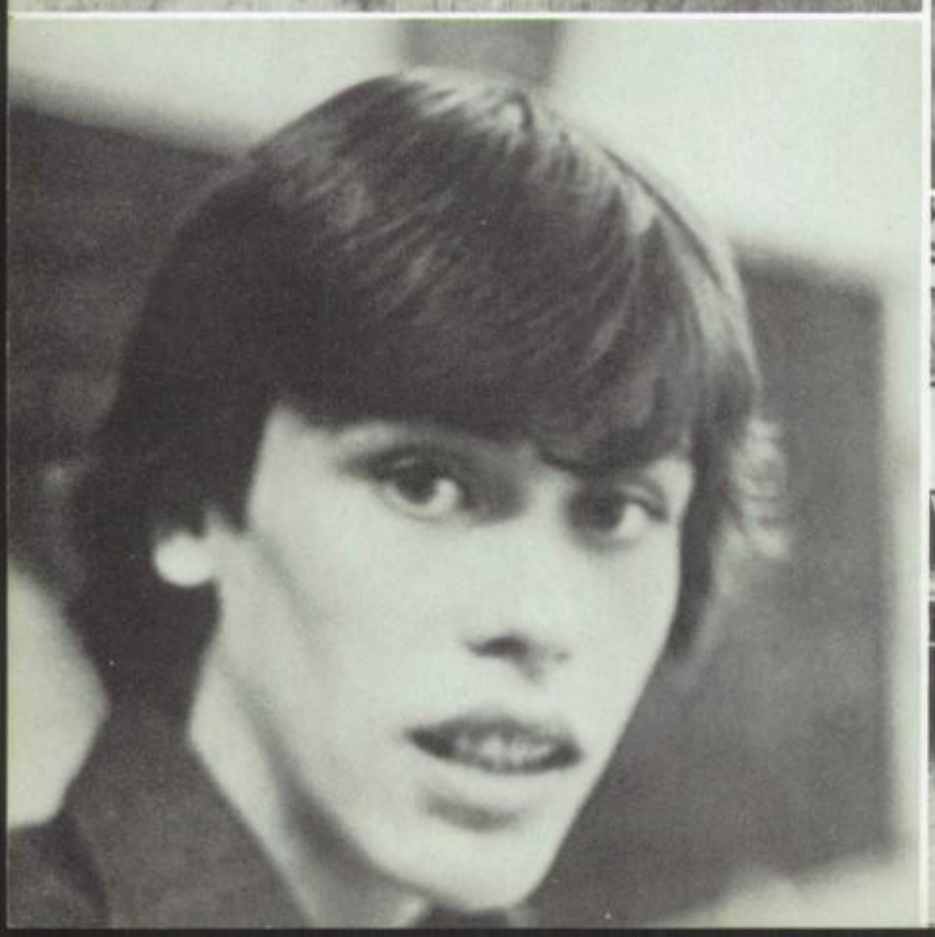
He belongs to New York

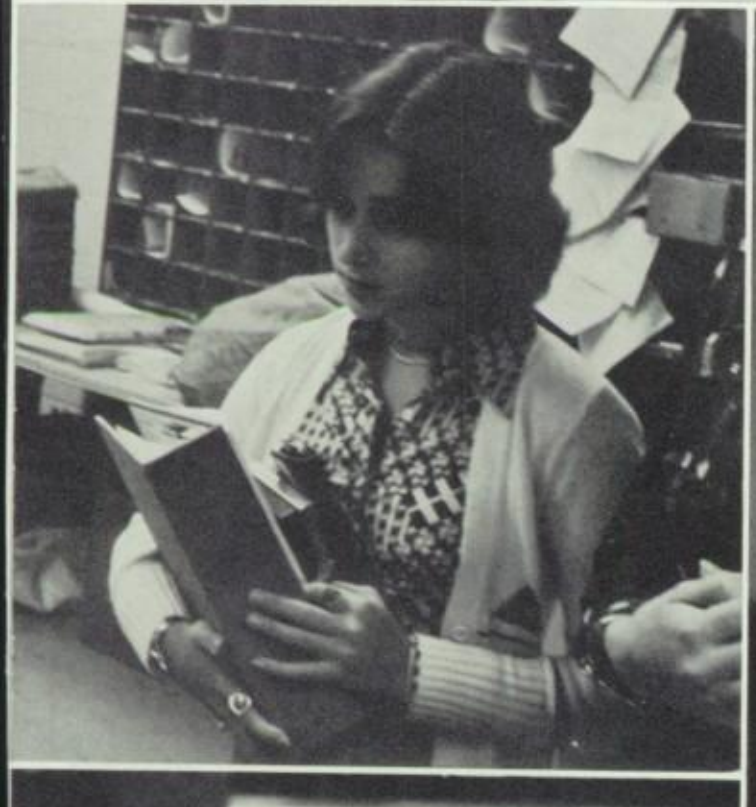


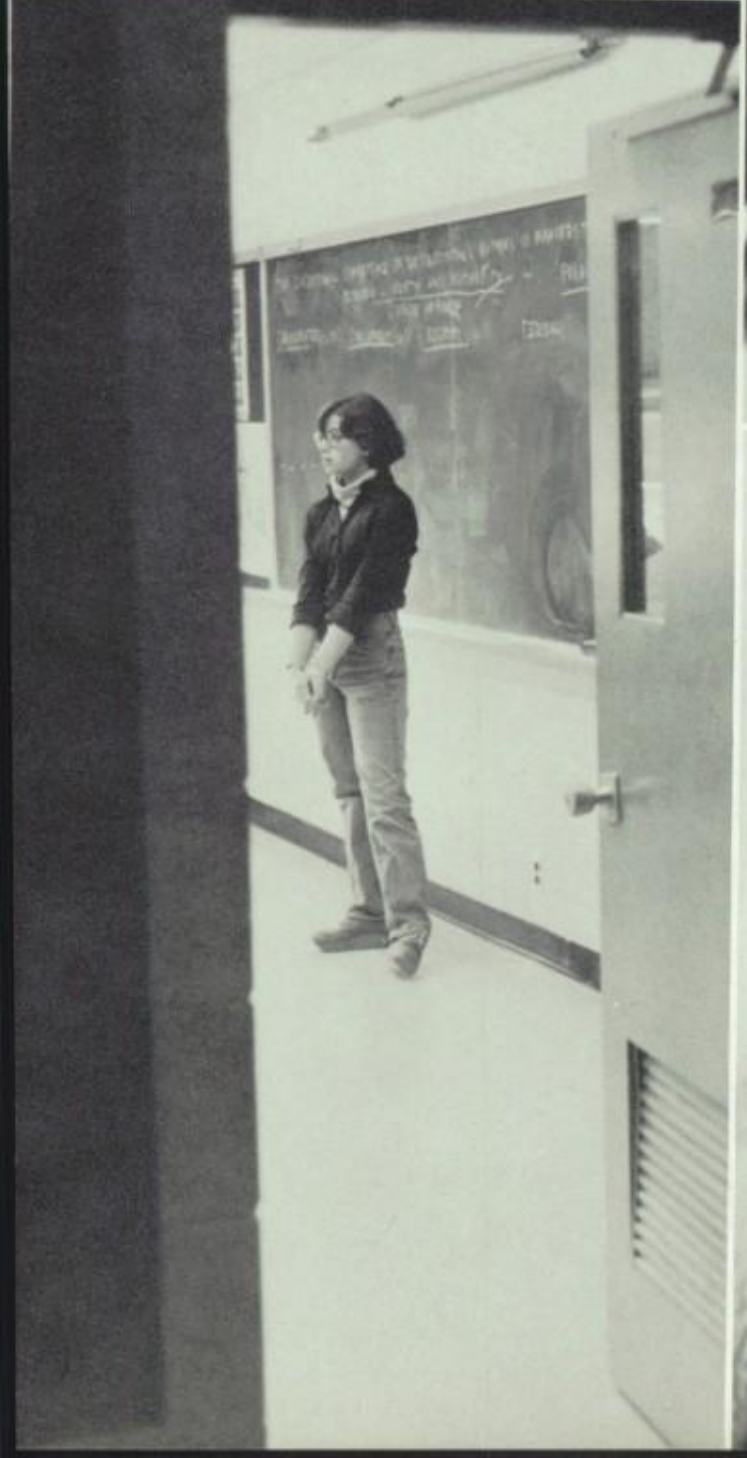


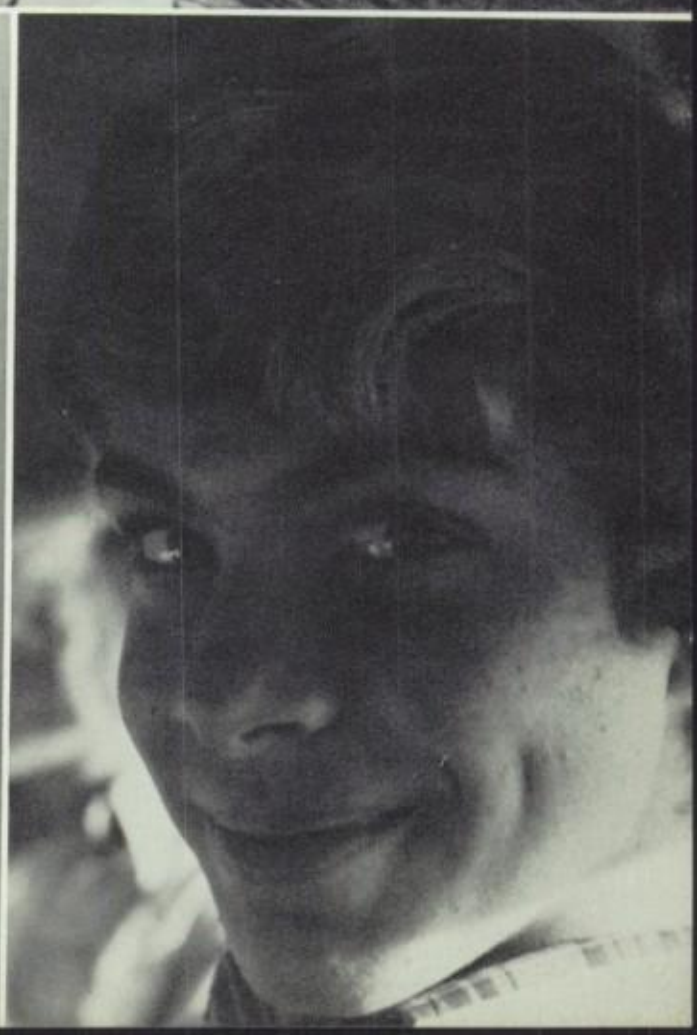












if you can keep your head when all about you are losing theirs and blaming it on you;
if you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
but make allowance for their doubting too:
if you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
or being lied about, don't deal in lies,
or being hated, don't give way to hating,
and yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise;
if you can dream — and not make dreams your master;
if you can think — and not make thoughts your aim,
if you can meet with triumph and disaster and treat those two impostors just the same;
if you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools, or watch the things you gave your life to, broken,
and stoop and build'em up with worn-out tools;
if you can make one heap of all your winnings and risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss, and lose, and start again at your beginnings and never breathe a word about your loss:
if you can force your heart and nerve and sinew to serve your turn long after they are gone, and so hold on when there is nothing in you except the will which says to them: "hold on!"
if you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue, or walk with kings — nor lose the common touch,
if neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
if all men count with you, but none too much:
if you can fill the unforgiving minute with sixty seconds' worth of distance run, yours is the earth and everything that's in it, and — which is more — you'll be a man, my son!

"come, my friends,

'tis not too late to seek a newer world.
push off, and sitting well in order smite the sounding furrows: for my purpose holds to sail beyond the sunset, and the paths of all the western stars, until i die.
it may be that the gulfs will wash us down;
it may be we shall touch the happy isles,
and see the great achilles, whom we knew, though much is taken, much abides; and though we are not now that strength which in old days moved earth and heaven; that which we are we are.
one equal temper of heroic hearts, made weak by time and fate, but strong in will
to strive, to seek, to find and not to yield."

"it doesn't matter if the water is cold or warm, if you're going to have to wade through it anyway."

then said a teacher, speak to us of teaching.
and he said:
no man can reveal to you aught but that which already lies half asleep in the dawning of your knowledge.
the teacher who walks in the shadow of the temple, among his followers, gives not of his wisdom but rather of his faith and his lovingness.
if he is indeed wise he does not bid you enter the house of his wisdom, but rather leads you to the threshold of your own mind.
the astronomer may speak to you of his understanding of space, but he cannot give you his understanding.
the musician may sing to you of the rhythm which is in all space, but he cannot give you the ear which arrests the rhythm nor the voice that echoes it.
and he who is versed in the science of numbers can tell of the regions of weight and measure, but he cannot conduct you thither.
for the vision of one man lends not its wings to another man.
and even as each one of you stands alone in god's knowledge, so must each one of you be alone in his knowledge of god and in his understanding of the earth.

each of us are unique unto ourselves. each of us have different beliefs. different things affect us in positive and negative ways. separately we function according to our own private desires and impulses. when we enter into a relationship together some changes take place.
i will try to accept your behavior when you are trying to fulfill yourself.
i will listen carefully and with understanding in a way that will help you arrive at your own solutions.
i will try to aid you in anyway i can in this search for self-discovery.
when my behavior is unacceptable to you, i will invite you to tell me openly just how you are affected, if i can do that without compromising myself. however, when the issue is of high priority to me, i must own my feelings, or else i will become unacceptable of myself and resentful of you.
as for myself, i am committed to the idea that my beliefs make me either happy or unhappy. when i am happy i will delight in it. when i am unhappy i will ask myself why.
i will not impose upon you the burden of making me happy, or keeping me from getting annoyed or angry. i know that i am responsible for those feelings in myself. i, therefore, give you the freedom to be and to take care of yourself. i also take that freedom for myself. only in that way can we give to each other freely, without resentment, fear or anger.
i am what i am. although that is not a constant. i can be no more than i am at any given minute. that is all i have to be. if i can accept myself without judgement wherever i am at, i can accept you and the world with an infinity of love.

BEST WISHES
And GOOD LUCK
To the CLASS OF '77

FROM THE CLASS OF '80

Look not mournfully into the Past.
It comes not back again. Wisely improve the Present.
It is Thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy Future, without fear and with a manly heart.

THE MASQUE AND MIME SOCIETY

Seeds are sown. Seeds sprout to grow in order to bloom into something — like a tree. As a tree matures it grows upward, learning of the world; it grows inwardly to the depths of understanding of itself; and it grows outwardly, to share its knowledge of life with its surrounding environment.

It takes many individual trees to make a forest. Like a collection of trees, there are collections of books. Yearbooks of many years make up a forest. We have planted a seed this year. The tree, the book, is composed of many ideas; ideas and thoughts of other trees, other books, other people. These ideas can be compared to branches of trees.

To me a tree represents growth like that of an individual reaching for knowledge. The knowledge is of himself and the surrounding environment. Focusing on the tree as a person we can see many strong, heavy, supporting, large branches among the weak, delicate ones. I see symbolism in a tree. I see emotions and expressiveness in the different branches. The tree has sky framing it; clouds — some dark, some bright and strong; different moods blowing the branches into different shapes. The tree still remains the same.

I look upon the trees as they exist in the forest, but when taken separately, each is unique and individual. Each tree has roots which extend into depths of understanding. The past is interwoven in the roots which nourish. Roots may not be seen, but they support the tree, sustain it.

The roots of this book are very special individuals to whom I would like to extend my sincere thanks. I would like to especially acknowledge the fantastic staff with whom I had the opportunity to work. There are a few particular individuals whom I would like to thank separately. They are Mr. Mario Conforti, our advisor, and the editors. I would like to recognize many real friends from whom we received support (thanks mom and dad). These people are all a part of the forest.

Branches are values and principles that keep you balanced. Ideas, or branches will sway or change with growth. As with roots, branches will sway or change with growth. As with roots, branches nurture the tree. Branches extend toward others and sometimes become intermingled. Through reaching and grasping they support one another. From support come understanding and knowledge. If you look closely you will see heavy supporting branches which are strong, some that are weak, and some that are broken off. There are also new branches/ideas growing, forming — taking shape.

A tree has a life during which it is growing. It extends its branches higher if its roots grow deeper and among others, gaining strength and courage to grow, to reach up. The reaching of the individual is a personal growth toward a goal which only he can perceive.

Look at the tree. The change is continuous, but always the tree will be itself; it never can be anything else. I would like to think of myself as a tree. I love every branch, every dark and bright cloud. Every part has a unique beauty. Many have climbed the tree. Some have carved in it, leaving a mark eternally. Some have brushed by it; others have just kept walking, not stopping to gaze or touch it. But everything and everyone has affected the growth of this tree. The results have been the birth of new branches, the growth in strength of smaller branches — the tree has grown.

It would be uncaring not to mention the loss of many branches, or enduring the worst storms. But the tree, the book, I, you, we-all-have kept the faith in our ability to grow and today we are standing up strong.

love, Kristi

life (līf) — one of the greatest mysteries of the universe. It has no simple definition. One can identify living things by certain activities that nonliving things do not perform. For example, living things grow, reproduce themselves, and require food. Living things also differ from nonliving things in the way the substances that compose them are put together. Philosophers and other scholars have pondered the meaning of life since ancient times. With the dawn of science, men began to study the different kinds of organisms, or living things. They classified living things as either plants or animals. Scientists have built a tremendous storehouse of knowledge about living things. But they still cannot say what life itself actually is.

Life takes many forms. It is evident as a sprout breaks through the earth.
